

Project-based instruction designed to create powerful readers and writers of informational text

Information in Action empowers teachers to become experts in project-based instruction. It provides professional learning support to give teachers background knowledge along with classroom-tested units that help them learn to put that knowledge into action. Every grade-level kit includes four model units, each with 15 lessons focused on specific informational text reading and writing skills. Students read, write, and conduct research for real audiences to address a real-world problem or need using these key informational text types:

- Informative/explanatory
- Procedural/how-to
- Persuasive: opinion
- Biography or nonfiction narrative

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Nell K. Duke, Ed.D. is a professor of literacy, language, and culture and a faculty affiliate in the combined program in education and psychology at the University of Michigan.
