Enhance Your Custom Take-Home Book Packs with Student Self-Select

Research indicates that self-selected reading is twice as powerful as teacher-selected reading in developing motivation and comprehension.¹ Give your students the option to choose books that match their personal interests via our student self-select online or onsite options.

Student Self-Select Online

- Pre-select from more than 400 titles based on Lexile range, Guided Reading level, or Developmental Assessment level.
- Student dashboards create an easy-to-use customization and student choice experience.
- Book packs are delivered to your site conveniently bundled by classroom and individually shrink-wrapped and labeled for each student.

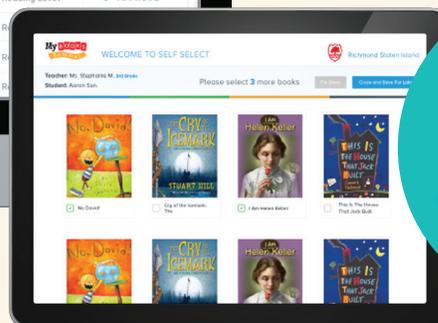

Student Self-Select Onsite

- Pre-select from more than 2,000 cross-cultural, thematic, and leveled titles and collections.
- Books are delivered to your site organized by grade or reading level for an easy-to-sort student self-select book distribution.

"We set up the self-selection of the take home like a book fair. Students select books based on their reading levels with the assistance of our intervention team."

—Michelle Smith,
Forts Pond Elementary

Student, teacher, and administrator dashboards create an easy-to-use online customization experience.

Lexington Schools “FACE” Literacy Needs in the Summer and Beyond

Since 2010, Lexington County School District in South Carolina has partnered with Scholastic to bridge the home to school connection gap. The district provides every child with the resources to own a book (or two) during the summer, and every parent with the steps to create quality time through reading.

Recognizing that all communities are unique in their own way, schools have partnered with Scholastic to customize their summer reading programs to fit the needs, interests, and themes of the students and parents they serve.

After trying the customization method, Gilbert Primary School decided to migrate to the self-selection model. This approach allowed for the child, with guidance from a specialist, to browse through the books and decide which authentic Scholastic titles sparked their interests. Both students and parents appreciated this method the most, and as praise for the program spread through the community, the school added self-selection distributions for the winter and spring breaks.

Book Customization

At Saxe Gotha Elementary School, pre-made packets were designed to match the reading levels of the students. The managers of the distribution process implemented input from those who knew the children’s reading habits better than anyone else—their teachers. Because of that diligence, every child received a desirable book matching his or her literacy level and reading interests.

Family Engagement

Red Bank Elementary promoted the program through a family night with book giveaways, popcorn, and a pajama party. This event turned out to be a huge success with a unsurpassed turnout of parents and children.

Forts Pond Elementary hosted a literacy workshop for grades 3–5. Parents were given tips for promoting literacy at home while their children engaged in literacy activities nearby. At the end of the workshop parents and their children selected a take-home book together, reinforcing the role of the parents as partners in their children’s literacy journey.
