Reading and Questioning

Active readers are those who ask themselves questions as they read. They have opinions. They make predictions and connect the story to their own experiences. They picture the story in their minds and look up words they don't know. The chart below will encourage you to ask questions as you read a story. Fill in the chart using a book you read this summer!

NAME OF BOOK	Chapter	Chapter	Chapter	Chapter	Chapter
WRITING: Are there particular words or phrases that really grab your attention?
QUESTION: What questions come to mind as you read?
PREDICTION: What predictions can you make about the plot or the characters?
IMAGE: What do you picture in your mind as you read a particular passage, or imagine a character or a setting?
RECALL: How does the story remind you of your life, or of other books or stories you've read?
VOCABULARY: Write down words you don't know and look them up, if necessary.
