Directions: As you read this issue of Scope, you might come across words you've never heard before. Use this chart to keep track of these new words. In the first column, write down each unknown word. In the second column, note the page number where the word appears. In the third column, take a guess at what the word might mean. (Context clues—that is, information around the unknown word—can help you make a guess.) Then write the dictionary definition in the fourth column. Challenge yourself to use each new word in a conversation today.
