

Dear Parents:

This week in class we are learning about the concept of earning and saving money. Scholastic has provided the curricula we are using, along with information from a unique college savings service called Upromise that may be of interest to you.

Upromise is a free service designed to help you turn your everyday spending into college savings. Upromise has teamed up with hundreds of America's leading companies, such as AT&T, General Motors, and Citi®. As a Upromise member, you can get college savings when you spend with the companies in the Upromise network. These companies are happy to thank you for being a customer of theirs by helping you with one of the biggest responsibilities you have as a parent – saving for your child's college education.

To learn more about Upromise and its partners, and to join the service for free, visit www.scholastic.com/upromise/ . You'll find games and activities to help teach your kids about money in a fun and appealing way, as well as information to get you started on saving for college.

Sincerely,