ABOUT US

For more than 20 years, the International Center for Leadership in Education has stood at the forefront of comprehensive school improvement. Driven by our basic mission—rigor, relevance, and relationships—our collaboration with thousands of schools and hundreds of districts has transformed the way educators deliver instruction to help improve student achievement. Our core belief is that success should not be defined by grades or tests, but rather by whether learners are equipped with the skills and knowledge needed to succeed in an ever-changing world.

Daggett System for Effective Instruction

The Daggett System for Effective Instruction provides a coherent focus for the development and support of instructional effectiveness to improve student achievement across an entire education organization.

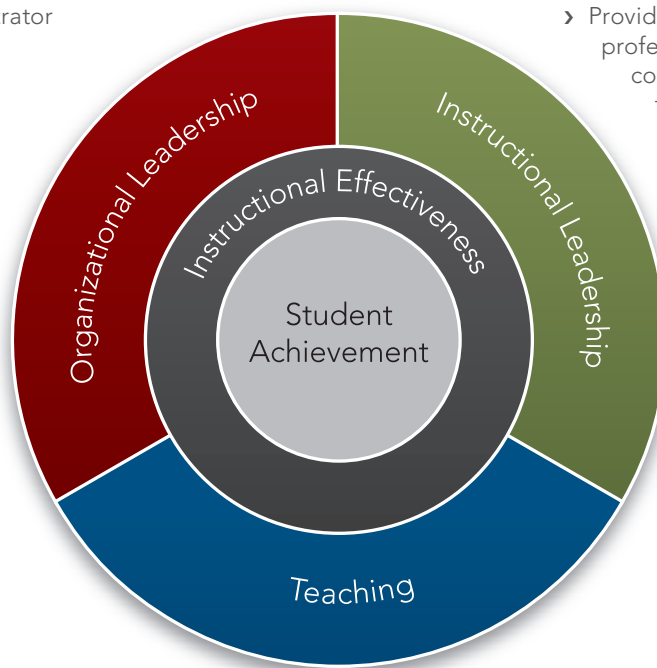

The following is a broad-spectrum overview of the objectives necessary to facilitate instructional effectiveness for each level of the education organization.

Organizational Leadership

- › Create a culture of high academic expectations, positive relationships.
- › Establish a shared vision and communicate to all constituent groups.
- › Align organizational structures and systems to the vision.
- › Build leadership capacity through an empowerment model.
- › Align teacher/administrator selection, support, and evaluation.
- › Support decision making with relevant data systems.

Instructional Leadership

- › Use research and establish the urgent need for change to promote higher academic expectations and positive relationships.
- › Develop, implement, and monitor standards-aligned curriculum and assessments.
- › Integrate literacy and math across all disciplines.
 - › Facilitate data-driven decision making to inform instruction.
- › Provide opportunities for professional learning, collaboration, and growth focused on high quality instruction and increased student learning.

Teaching

- › Build effective instruction based on rigorous and relevant expectations.
- › Create and implement an effective learner environment that is engaging and aligned to learner needs.
- › Possess and continue to develop content area knowledge and make it relevant to the learner.
- › Plan and provide learning experiences using effective research-based strategies that are embedded with best practices including the use of technology.
- › Use assessment and data to guide and differentiate instruction.
- › Further content and instructional knowledge through continuous professional learning that is both enriching and collaborative.

About Ray McNulty

A keynote speaker at the state, national, and international levels, Ray McNulty addresses the need for school systems to help students become creative thinkers who can use their knowledge in different ways. He strongly believes schools and education systems must be proactive and reach out to help forge solutions that will help students become successful in the classroom and their lives outside of school. Ray is committed to helping schools and school systems embrace the process of change, raise performance standards for both students and teachers, and build solid connections between schools and their communities.

About Sue Szachowicz

Susan Szachowicz is dedicated to ensuring all students achieve college and career readiness and firmly believes the ideology: "high expectations, high standards—no excuses." She has served students at Brockton High School, a large (4,300 student) comprehensive urban high school for her entire career and describes herself as Brockton High's greatest cheerleader. Sue continues to be committed to performance transformation at the school and in the state and has served on numerous state commissions on school improvement particularly regarding the Massachusetts assessment program.
